A few days ago a person was arrested in Houlton for selling liquor without a United States licease, and taken to Bangon for examination. After arriving there bonds were obtained and the person released to appear when wanted, but instead of hanging around Brigor, the party took the night train for Woodstock, and on arrival the e. hoofed it to the boundary line, two milts distant from Houlton village. The fact becoming known, parties from Houlton went over the line, got the party "Tull" and then it was an easy matter to step over into the United States with their victim, who now reposes in the county jail.

Among ther things he said that in order to have note prosperity the country should have more circulation. the country should have more circulation. The highest prosperity was possible only by the wides clistrout of fevery article of necessity and this pould apply to money of a universal value. He referred to the constitutly linereasing avoidance of the use of money in busin as transactions except for the payment or exchanges and balances due. In this transfer of aggregate values a medicin would answer which could be withdrawn as soon as it had furtilled the purpose for which it lind been used. Provision should be made for the redemption of these paper mediums in count, thus giving them are alvalue.

A government he sak which could stamp a piece of paper and call it a dollar A government he sake which could stamp a piece of paper and call it a dollar could just as well take a dollar in bullion and stamp it into two silver dollars and this could not but produce an unstable feeling. When the tremendous amount of silver circulations bull have exceeded the silver circulation shull have exceeded the storage resources of the transury it will be forced use for the payment of the government's obligations and gold would then be driven out of circulation and become mere merchandise being more and more sought after for its ntrinste value, while eliver as a medium of circulation would become the only true standard. I as a comparison between greenbacks and hank notes the specifier said that a hank note had a relative vente to its uses as a bank check or baggage check had in their respective uses. These two kinds of checks partook of the value of the thing each represented and facili ated the business for which each, was intended. Our currency, he said, should be equally interchangable all eyer the world and this was impossible on the part of the greenback.

A CURIOUS PROCERDING. The Houlton Pioneer has the following: For a number of seasons many of our citizens have been in the habit of getting colts and lambs pastured "just over the line," near Parks' Hill. For some reason or other the Do-minion authorities concluded they would put a stop to the practice, and accordingly made a seizure last week of several colt and lambs, and we learn that the property was sold at anction in Woodstock last Sat urday.: The same morning officers paid another visit to the pasture with the intention of making another haul. Fortunately the fog was quite thick and enabled a man from this side to gather the stock together and get them on to American soil without ing discovered. The Banker's Daughter, This deeply interesting play will be presented at the Opera House next Monday evening by Crossen's Un on Square Theatre Company. The story is familier to play-goers and readers. The sacrifice of a daughter to save her father, her marriage with a man she does not love, but who is the soul of bonor and pure devotion; his discovery of his wife's indifference to him after having lived with ber for a period of years, offering daily his devotion at a shrine which with the blandness of love he could not see was veiled to han; separation, and in the end, the husband's separation, and in the end, the husband's recall by the wife, who daring his absense his learned to know how well see loved him—all this is related with a wealth of incidents that engages and retains the closest attention and a lepth of pathos that appeals to the line most sensibilities, of the spectator. "The "Banker's Daughter" is certainly avery powerful and absorbing play. The story is full of interest, there is an abundance of comedy element to brighten it me, and, above all, the oas, there is an abundance of comedy ele-ment to brighten it up, and, above all, the characters are made to talk and not like men and women. men and women. talk o me about window plants and strawberries, and now you have begun on the plants and have somehow come out-doors into he strawberry bed." Ah! Miss Julia, you have got his thing to learn: that Nature is not made up of separate parts or forces or creatures that have no relation to each other, but all its parts are linked and related. So you can't find tut a truth about one part without it helps you to understand all other parts. I said your papa's farm family included all sorts of creatures.

"Not these mosquitoes?" Yes, these very mosquitoes. This has been a wet summer hearabouts, and, for a rarity, we have find an abundance of these, fellows. But while about one in ten millions of them gets a drop of blood from man or beast, the rest of them are doing the very best kind of work in preventing malat ous fevers. If I allowed any swampy places about to be undrained, or allowed bigger members of my family to create slop holes near the house, I should need the mosquito to hurry up and save my li-è. Such holes, if you could look into them with the eyes of a beetle, would show you a lot of little black imps, called spores or germs. They are dichtheria, scarle fever, typhus fever, and a lot more of that sort; and some night they will ome out of the slop and go into my house and get into bed with my babies, and then I should next have to bury those babies. But a lew millions of mosquitoes do a good deal to kil these imps. They turn just as much decaying, fetid matter, which will poison us, into live matter as they can, and that only sucks a bit of blood from you. Of course all the mosquitoes that child stand on a square acre could not distroy poison as fast as a nasty housefold or a shiftless man can make its A mosquito about a clean and dry place is lonesome, and soon gets picked up by a

Each robin eats a great many rards of worms for every strawberry le takes. We have to feed any Jersey cows three times a day, and ought to expect to feed our acres worked hirds also. They do as successory the for us as if they gave; tilk mid they require less care. Bediefs we do not have to winter them.

Then the mot is will go about to do son e very important work. They will straybergies, I should like it: And another, they carry about the pollen and mix it everywhere. It is astonishing how much the progress of our world, and its improvement in way of fruits and flowers has depended on worms and moths and butterflies. Then there are others, as I showed you, doing the scavenger work, as they are on your plants. "Here, Mr. P., we started at the window plants, went off to the strawberry bed in our talk, and now have got back again." Now Julia, I have tried to show you how there is a fixed and mutual relation between all the parts of Nature.

This will be but a slight task if the bushes have previously been well cared for; it is not half the work to keep a roy of currant bushes clean during the enth-year as it is to clean it out twice a year and let it go weedy the rest of the season. If the bushes are kept in good condition the leaves will be large and will keep a plank green, and the fruit will keep on them until September, but if the bushes are neglected, so the leaves turn yellow, or the worms are permitted to cut the leaves badly, the fruit will not keep good until the first of August. There are few crops grown that are more neglected than the current and few that will bear neglect better.
